

The artistic talents of Natalia Andreeva stem from the hand of a woman born and bred on the harsh yet beautiful landscapes of Siberia, in Novosibirsk, Russia; but emerging from that chilly land comes a delicate sensitivity for both watercolors and traditional oils that stems from a warm heart and a fertile mind.

Andreeva's studies in traditional art forms have led her pursuit of mastery over portraits, landscapes, and still life paintings. In each work, her concentration on form and composition are reminiscent of realist works, while her daring use of color and simulated light show a deep love of modern techniques.

Educated at the prestigious Novosibirsk State Pedagogical Institute, she received a superb education in art and art history and found unrivaled studio experience, which she continued with her education in Moscow.

Upon immigrating to America, her work was quickly embraced by critics, receiving much attention in the art-intense communities of Michigan, Illinois and now Florida. Her work continues to evolve, and her reputation precedes her as her art receives new praise across the United States.
